

INTERPROFESSIONAL JOURNAL OF HEALTH SCIENCES

Interprof. J. Health Sci. Vol.22, Issue 1, January-June 2024

Editorial Note

Research is a dynamic process that thrives on collaboration. Choosing the right public platform to share experimental findings is crucial, much like meticulously controlling variables in scientific studies. In today's scientific landscape, we have a responsibility to expand research beyond specific locations and institutions, fostering innovation rather than confining it to a privileged few. Moreover, when research receives public funding, it becomes imperative to make the resulting discoveries accessible to everyone. These valuable insights, spanning various scientific fields, should not remain obscure. The Interprofessional Journal of Health Sciences (Interprof. J. Health Sci.) is dedicated to achieving this accessibility. By publishing in English—the global scientific language—our journal ensures that new discoveries reach a wide audience. As knowledge grows exponentially, Interprof. J. Health Sci. covers a diverse range of scholarly articles, including reviews, original research, brief reports, case studies, communications, and editorial correspondences.

Our journal has a clear mission: to disseminate cutting-edge knowledge across health, science, technology, biomedical, and socio-medical fields. Scientists and readers engaging with our current and upcoming volumes will discover a rich array of biological research, potentially applicable to their own scholarly inquiries. As part of the collaborative scientific process, our journal plays a vital role in sharing information with the global scientific community. We recognize that research progress often occurs incrementally, with seismic technological breakthroughs being the exception rather than the norm. These incremental steps are the lifeblood of our scientific community.

Our aspiration is to actively contribute to this process by sharing the collective expertise of researchers both within Thailand and internationally. Additionally, we have streamlined the manuscript submission process through our online portal (<https://li05.tci-thaijo.org/index.php/IJHS>), making it easier for researchers worldwide to contribute. We extend heartfelt gratitude to all contributors to this volume, especially those who have overcome significant time constraints to share their scholarly works. Our esteemed colleagues, who diligently review each manuscript, also deserve recognition for their invaluable contributions to the editorial and proofreading tasks. Lastly, we welcome feedback and constructive suggestions from our readership, with the aim of continuously enhancing the quality of our journal.