

INTERPROFESSIONAL JOURNAL OF HEALTH SCIENCES

Interprof. J. Health Sci. Vol. 22, Issue 2, July–December 2024

Editorial Note

Research is a dynamic, evolving process, enriched and advanced through collaborative efforts. Selecting an appropriate public forum for disseminating each series of experiments is as critical as the meticulous control of variables within the studies themselves. In today's global scientific landscape, expanding the geographical and institutional scope of research is essential to foster innovation, rather than limiting these activities to the interests of a select few. Furthermore, when research is publicly funded, it is imperative that the findings be accessible to a broad audience. Such findings, with the potential to benefit a wide array of scientific fields, should not remain obscure. The "Interprofessional Journal of Health Sciences" (Interprof. J. Health Sci.) is dedicated to enhancing this accessibility. By publishing in English, the lingua franca of the global scientific community, our journal promotes the widespread dissemination of new insights and developments.

As the scientific knowledge base continues to expand rapidly, "Interprof. J. Health Sci." seeks to support this growth by publishing a diverse range of scholarly articles, including reviews, original research, brief reports, case studies, communications, and editorials. As a peer-reviewed journal committed to timely publication, our primary mission is to disseminate contemporary, high-quality knowledge across health, science, technology, biomedical, and socio-medical disciplines. Scientists and readers engaging with our current and future volumes will encounter a comprehensive collection of biological research, with findings that may prove relevant to their own scholarly pursuits. Recognizing that scientific progress is often incremental—where groundbreaking discoveries are rare—these gradual advancements form the foundation of ongoing scholarly inquiry.

Our goal is to actively contribute to this advancement by disseminating the collective expertise of researchers from Thailand and around the world, thereby enriching the scientific knowledge base. Additionally, we have streamlined our manuscript submission process through an online portal (<https://li05.tci-thaijo.org/index.php/IJHS>), facilitating contributions from researchers globally. The editorial board extends profound gratitude to all contributors to this volume, especially those who, despite significant time constraints, have submitted their scholarly works. We also offer our sincere appreciation to our esteemed reviewers, typically three per manuscript, whose dedication to the editorial and proofreading processes is invaluable. Finally, we invite feedback and constructive suggestions from our readership, as we continually strive to enhance the quality and impact of the journal.