

INTERPROFESSIONAL JOURNAL OF HEALTH SCIENCES

Interprof. J. Health Sci. Vol.23, Issue 1, January-June 2025

Editorial Note

Scientific research is a continually evolving enterprise that thrives on collaboration and the open exchange of knowledge. Just as meticulous control of experimental variables is fundamental to ensuring scientific rigor, the selection of an appropriate and accessible platform for disseminating research findings is equally essential. In the context of today's globally interconnected research environment, it is no longer sufficient for scholarly discoveries to remain limited to individual institutions or geographic regions. To truly foster innovation, it is imperative that research outputs be disseminated widely and equitably. This is particularly crucial when research is supported by public funding, as the resulting knowledge should be accessible to all stakeholders—not restricted to a privileged few.

The Interprofessional Journal of Health Sciences (Interprof. J. Health Sci.) is firmly committed to advancing open access to scientific knowledge. By publishing exclusively in English—the lingua franca of the global scientific community—the journal ensures that new findings are disseminated to an expansive international readership. In recognition of the rapidly growing body of scientific literature, the journal accepts a diverse range of manuscript types, including original research articles, systematic and narrative reviews, case reports, brief communications, and editorial correspondence.

The journal's core mission is to facilitate the dissemination of high-quality research across a broad spectrum of disciplines, encompassing health sciences, biomedical research, technological innovation, and socio-medical studies. Readers of both current and future volumes will encounter a wide array of interdisciplinary and biologically oriented research, offering insights that may inform and enrich their own scholarly endeavors. As an active contributor to the international scientific community, Interprof. J. Health Sci. acknowledges that meaningful scientific progress is often incremental, with major breakthroughs occurring infrequently. Nonetheless, it is these cumulative advances that form the foundation of sustained innovation.

In support of this mission, the journal provides a robust and inclusive platform for researchers from Thailand and around the world to share their work. The manuscript submission process has been optimized through an efficient online system (<https://li05.tci-thaijo.org/index.php/IJHS>), designed to facilitate accessibility and ease of use. The editorial team extends its sincere appreciation to all authors contributing to the current volume, particularly those who submitted their work within constrained timelines. Special thanks are also due to our peer reviewers, whose expert evaluations and editorial guidance are indispensable to maintaining the scholarly integrity and editorial quality of the journal. Finally, we warmly welcome feedback and constructive suggestions from our readership as we continue to advance the scope, quality, and global impact of Interprof. J. Health Sci.