

Editorial Note

Dear Readers, Contributors, and Colleagues,

We are delighted to announce the availability of Volume 29, Issue 1, of the Burapha Science Journal online, covering the period from January to April 2024. In this edition, we have accepted a total of 27 articles, with a significant majority (85%) originating from external submissions. Marine science remains prominently featured in this volume with 8 articles (30%), while the field of physics is on the rise with 6 articles (22%). Additionally, articles in food science (5 articles, 18%) are closely following. This issue also includes articles from various scientific disciplines, showing the richness of these fields. Authors across diverse scientific disciplines aligned with our scopes are invited to submit articles for publication in the Burapha Science Journal.

We are grateful for the dedication and hard work of our contributors, reviewers, and editorial team in maintaining the high quality and diverse range of research expertise presented in this volume. Your commitment is crucial to ensuring the ongoing success of the Burapha Science Journal.

Our journal is dedicated to enhancing its quality and aims to secure inclusion in international indexing databases. Achieving these goals requires support from numerous contributors, with a special acknowledgment of the dedicated editorial board. Their enduring patience and commitment have been pivotal to our progress, and we express sincere appreciation for their invaluable contributions thus far.

We appreciate your involvement in the Burapha Science Journal community.

Best regards,

Sutin Kingtong, Ph.D.

Editor-in-Chief

Burapha Science Journal